Shoplifters beware!

By RON PORTER

Christmas is a bonanza for shoplifters.

In every store the shelves and aisles are filled, making theft easier for the potential thief. Nearly 50 per cent of all shopliftings are reported in November and December.

It'll get a little harder if the police department has its way. The department has begun a program it hopes will cut down on shoplifting.

Shoplifting is the fastest growing crime in the United States. Losses to businesses run at a rate of $10 million a day or $3.5 billion per year. Losses are eventually paid for by the honest customer in higher prices.

One out of every 10 who enter a store is a potential shoplifter, according to police. Most are amateurs. They are housewives, businessmen and children.

They commit the crime by concealing merchandise in their pockets, under their coats or clothing, or by wearing it out. If there is a method of shoplifting, someone has probably discovered it.

How large the losses are, and how many shoplifters there are in Sikeston, nobody knows. But police think both numbers are high.

To combat the crime, the police department has mailed to businessmen an information packet containing a copy of the state shoplifting law and tips on how to reduce thefts. Businessmen have received their copies in time to help fight the problem during the Christmas season.

"It is impossible for a police department to effectively control shoplifting by themselves because of the vastness of the problem," according to Lt. Leonard Campbell.

He said most of the burden falls on the businessman, both to apprehend and to prosecute.

Under the Missouri Shoplifting law penalties range from fines up to $1,000 to imprisonment from one to 10 years. Most shoplifters convicted in Sikeston City Court are fined $110.

Police are recommending to businessmen that they try to arrange easily - concealed merchandise so that it is difficult to steal, such as putting it behind glass counters, or putting only one item of a set on display.

Always try to give prompt service to customers, police say. The customer

Five hurt in SeMo accidents

Four traffic accidents in the Bootheel area Friday and early today resulted in injuries to five, according to the highway patrol.

Walter Pigago, 59, of St. Louis was treated and released at the Dexter Hospital Friday after driving his car into the side of a train at 11 a.m. four miles west of Dexter on Route ZZ.

Three were injured Friday in an accident at 11:50 a.m. four miles east of Wyatt on Highway 60. Injured were Larry Waymon Brown, 23, of Charleston with a possible concussion; a passenger in the Brown car, Sherry Brown, 21, of Charleston with head cuts and Lonnie Edward Schade, 39, of Charleston, driver of the other car, with minor facial cuts. All were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

The accident occurred as Brown was slowing for a left turn. The Schade auto, on the wrong side of the road, struck the Brown car, the patrol said.

Claude Camden Vance, 21, of Sikeston received minor injuries at 11:40 p.m. Friday one mile east of Miner on Highway 62 when he attempted to make a left turn, was unfamiliar with the vehicle, applied brakes, spun around and ran off the road.

He was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

At 12:10 a.m. today one mile south of Wolf Island on Highway 77 Lynn Dick, 19, of East Prairie received chin cuts when he was passing another vehicle, hit water, lost control and ran off the road. He was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

Three firms burglarized during night

Police discovered a break-in at 1:45 a.m. today at Terminix Pest Control Company, 1623 E. Malone Ave.

The Sunshine Gulf Station on East Malone was entered between 6 p.m. and 8:45 p.m. Friday, but nothing was reported missing.

Hailey's Mobil Service Station, 620 S. Kingshighway, was broken into late Thursday night or early Friday morning. Police said nothing appeared to be missing.

Fire levels area church

CROWDER-- A fire which broke out about 2 a.m. today destroyed the Crowder Church of God, as the Sikeston and Miner fire units were unable to save the building.

Firemen said they concentrated on protecting a 500- gallon propane gas tank near the church and kept pouring water on it to keep it from exploding.

The cause of the fire was not determined, firemen said.

The old frame church building was built in 1934. It served a congregation living between Morehouse and Morley.

The minister, the Rev. John Cullins of Sikeston, said this morning that no arrangements have been made to meet in another location for Sunday services.

Mail early

If packages aren't mailed by Dec. 10 and letters by Dec. 15, they might not arrive in time for Christmas, Postmaster Don Pasaka announced today.

Pasaka said the recommended deadline for airmail greetings and parcels to armed forces members in Europe is next Monday.

He also announced that to accommodate people unable to visit the post office during normal working hours, the Sikeston Post Office will be open from 8 a.m. to 12 noon, Dec. 16. full window service will be available that day.

Postmaster Pasaka asks everyone to cooperate with the post office and mail letters and packages as soon as possible so they can be delivered on time.

Demos electing chairman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic National Committee began debate Saturday on whether to fire party chairman, Jean Westwood, and open the way for an election bid by Robert Strauss, a Dallas lawyer.

A motion to declare the chairmanship vacant was introduced as the committee opened its first meeting since the Nov. 7 elections. A showdown vote was expected later Saturday after debate.

The motion was placed on the agenda by the executive committee onan agreement between the Westwood and Strauss camps. If Mrs. Westwood is ousted, there was to be a onehour recess before electing a new chairman. Strauss was considered the front-runner among several candidates seeking the job.

Strauss, running with the support of a conservative-moderate coalition seeking to re-impose its traditional party control, claimed to have 110 votes to elect him chairman.

But he conceded there was some doubt over whether all of these would first take the dramatic and highly unorthodox step of first deposing publicly the head of a major political party.

A 105-vote majority would be enough to carry either issue, but Mrs. Westwood, who says she will force Strauss to evict her before he can run for the office, claimed 115 votes against a motion to remove her.

Mrs. Westwood, handpicked by George McGovern for the chairmanship after his presidential nomination last August, has been under heavy pressure to quit ever since his landslide defeat in November.

Strauss, a former party treasurer and one of its most successful money raisers, has the backing of a bloc of labor leaders disgruntled over the McGovern nomination, party conservatives led by a core of Southern governors, and moderates saying they want the party pulled back toward centerfield.

Mrs. Westwood, who offered to resign for virtually any replacement other than Strauss, has shown little desire in recent weeks to keep the job herself if she ould hand it over to someone who could preserve at least most of the new party reforms fostered by McGov3rn.

The outcome of today's showdown was expected to set the tone of the Democrats' political approach and appeal in the years leading up to 1976 when the presidency will be wide open again with the retirement of President Nixon.

Mrs. Westwood offered a week ago before Democratic governors meeting in St. Louis to step down if a compromise candidate could be found. But the governors went ahead and endorsed Strauss and asked Mrs Westwood to bow out gracefully.

The vote at the governors' caucus was accomplished through the leadership of conservative Southern and Western governors, but Strauss has steadfastly denied he is a regional or right-wing candidate.

Throughout the past week Mrs. Westwood frequently has repeated her offer to quit the race if Strauss would, and Strauss repeatedly declined, claiming he had the votes to win.

Mrs. Westwood said both she and Strauss had come to represent extremes in the party, rightly or wrongly, and a victory by either would le3ve the party bitterly divided.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last in a series of articles about the 11 agencies benefitting from this year's United Fund Campaign. Today's article deals with the Boy Scouts.

By DONNA SATTERFIELD

The Boy Scouts of America have been allocated $10,200 from this year's Sikeston United Fund goal of $46,327.

Sikeston troops are members of the Okeechobee District, which includes Benton, Oran, Commerce, East Prairie, New Madrid, Kewanee, Canalou and Morehouse.

Okeechobee District is one of five districts of the Southeast Missouri Boy Scout Council.

The Southeast Missouri Council serves 4,919 boys in 14 counties: Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid, Stoddard, Pemiscot, Dunklin, Butler, Ripley, Carter, Wayne, Cape Girardeau, Madison, Perry and Bollinger.

The Boy Scouts are funded principally through United Fund contributions. The remainder of money needed comes from parents and friends of scouting who make extra contributions by enrolling as sustaining members or contribute special gifts or bequests.

Even though scouting receives much help from volunteer scouters, money is needed to provide good programs.

The Boy Scouts serve the community by exposing groups of boys to a character and skill building environment. Superimposed on camping trips and badge-earning activities is leadership traits. Money from the United Fund provides the substructure of the operation to make boys "physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

Some of the money from United Funds is used to operate camping facilities and to hold Camporees — two- day campouts filled with scouting activities, competitive events and general "roughing it" procedures.

Other money is used to pay for the employment of professional scout executives who devote full time to administering to scouting affairs. These men are trained to organize community leaders and resources to provide an educational program of scouting.

Each council maintains an office with a clerical staff. The Southeast Missouri Council office is located in Cape Girardeau. Jerry Beckner of Cape Girardeau is the Council executive.

Fred French of Sikeston is the Okeechobee District executive and works with Scouts in Scott, New Madrid and Mississippi counties.

The 1973 budget for the council is $117,012. Okeechobee District tries to contribute $26,000 to $28,000 toward the total budget. One per cent of this money goes to the national Boy Scout movement.

ON THE COLD SHORE

With chill and grayness unrelieved, the briefest days of a dying year communicate their sullenness to the sleeping land — and to the spirits of men. Indian Summer was too long ago to be remembered. The green tide of spring, beginning even now to rise somewhere off his dour coast of middle December, is still too far distant to be imagined. We are trapped between.

There is Christmas to look ahead to. But, except for children, the cheer of that celebration is too brief to warm a whole winter. There are the agony and triumph of the endless football wars, with heroes born or broken before our very bloodshot eyes. But when the game ends and the tube goes blank, the gray season comes crowding in again.

The easiest course, then — the one of least resistance — is to surrender to bleakness, to clamoring regrets. Of friends moved away. Of plans unfinished or gone wrong. Of families grown smaller according to the laws of age and time. Of confinement — the tedium of closed windows and pressing walls.

The gloom is unfair, unsupportable. And then, on the last possible morning of endurance, the day breaks cold but clear. Something moves out there on the brown lawn — a foolish robin. The frozen ground goes mushy. A bud breaks. And in a rush the green tide coms in. Don't disbelieve. It always has — it always will.

COMMUNISM IS WORSE

The news, in early November, of the death of the Russian writer, Yuri Galanskov, who is said to have died on the operating table in a Soviet prison hospital is a sad reminder of the fate of all those behind the iron curtain who even so much as attempt to write as their conscience would lead them. Galanskov was one of those heroic figures who openly defended Alexander Ginzberg, Yuri Daniel, Andrei Sinyansky and others against literary repression by the Communists. It was for this that he was sentenced, in 1968, to seven years of hard labor in a red concentration camp.

It was just 100 years ago when another great Russian writer, Dostoyevsky, predicted what Communism would be like. He warned, in his "Brothers Karamazov";

"If you were to destroy in mankind the belief in immortality, not only love but every living force maintaining the life of the world would at once be dried up. Moreover, nothing would be immoral, everything would be lawful ...

"Those who do not believe in God talk of socialism or anarchism, of the transformation of all humanity on a new pattern. They have more fantastic dreams than we. They aim at justice; but denying Christ, they will end up by flooding the earth with blood.

"The world has proclaimed the reign of freedom, especially of late, but what do we see in this freedom of theirs? Nothing but slavery and destruction. Interpreting freedom as the multiplication and rapid satisfaction of desires, men distort their natures. Soon they will drink blood instead of wine; they are being led to it."

Galanskov's death at the age of only 33 reminds us that, bad as things were under the Czar in Russia, Communism is worse. Dostoyevsky, too, was arrested and sent to Siberia; but he lived to the ripe age of sixty, and even after his imprisonment continued, for many years, to write and publish his high controversial works. No writer behind the curtain today can speak the truth as he sees it and live to tell about it.

in the state and national campaigns just ended, many Democrats doubtfully hoped for the best, while fearing the worst.

And the worst, so far as Democrats were concerned, happened in both the Presidential and Missouri Governorship races. Neither result was much of a surprise.

Since then, reams of paper, and hours of air time have been wasted by observers who have tried to analyze the campaigns and explain what went wrong in those two races.

Some may be right, some wrong, but no one factor, no one action, no one person, can be blamed by we Democrats for what happened. There isn't much use to alibi.

The truth is that both President Nixon and Kit Bond created an image that the voters liked better than they did the image of McGovern and Dowd--regardless of whether we thing the public was right or wrong.

A further truth is that Nixon is as much our President and Bond our Governor as they are the President and Governor of those who supported them. This is our state and our nation, regardless of party affiliations, and both Democrats and Republicans have to live under the leaders the majority has chosen.

If two-thirds of the people of the nation, who voted for President Nixon, can live under his leadership, so can the rest of us. The same thought applies to Missouri and its new Governor, who incidentally is the first Northeast Missourian since Lloyd Stark to hold that high office. Prior to that, Northeast Missouri had its Gov. Elliott Major. Even though we may not have voted for Bond, we can be glad that he is from our area, and wish him well.

"SCIENTIFIC

While we talk of preserving human resources and the environment, we're tolerating the emasculation of the one source of human betterment in the future -- science and technology. In a hard-hitting Address, Mr. Robert Anderson, president of North American Rockwell Corporation, a firm that has been dedicated to the aerospace program and the application of aerospace technology to civilian life, shows how through "scientific starvation" today we can become a second- rate nation tomorrow. Recent abdication of U. S. aircraft leadership to the U.S.S.R., France and Britain -- a leadership we have held for 40 years -- is but symbolic of a trend that has been set in motion by the sheer ignorance of antitechnology fanatics. Less than 1.5 cents of each national budget dollar go for space research and technology as contrasted to 42 cents for human resources, ad still the human resource extremists clamor for the cent and a half.

In Mr. Anderson's words, "Suppose we give in and abandon the national space program. Suppose we shut down the whole NASA establishment, and we leave Cape Kennedy to the swamps from which it emerged less than 20 years ago. Suppose we turn loose the engineers and scientists and technicians and wipe out hundreds of thousands of supporting jobs. Suppose we darken all the university laboratories that support our space research and development effort ... Does anyone seriously think that the United States, after that drastic action, would be a better place in which to live? That the poor would be less poor? That slums would disappear? That suddenly our rivers would be clean and our air as fresh and untainted as a Spring breeze?"

As a matter of demonstrable fact, Mr. Anderson shows with cold figures the opposite would be true. He praises the Administration's job-coupling program, designed to salvage underused technical talents. He notes that it, "... fits in precisely with a proposal already made (by his company for) ... a Federal Ready Reserve of aerospace professionals." The scientific and organizational abilities of these professionals are the best hope of the nation for a better tomorrow.

And by all means, consult closely with local law enforcement leaders and government officials.

THE STUFF OF SUCCESS

How often have you heard someone say, "They've got it made", in referring to some major business enterprise that perhaps had its inception in someone's basement as a one-man shop. The idea is prevalent that once a company gets out of the basement, figuratively speaking, and joins the "big time" its future is assured. As a matter of simple truth, this is pure fiction. No matter how big a company gets, its future is promising only so long as the same kind of ingenuity and management imagination that got it started in the first place stays with it through the ensuing years.

Coming through the year with a reasonable profit margin is a sweating- it- out proposition for a large company no less than a small one. In both cases, success and calculated risk go hand in hand. No better illustration of this can be found than in the pioneering step Pan American World Airways has taken in introducing the new Pan Am Boeing 747 Jet. It took the same courage and imagination for this airline company to commit a billion dollars to the 747 that it takes for a fledgling business enterprise to invest in a piece of equipment to the tune of a few thousand dollars that will start it on the way to becoming the "big" company of tomorrow.

The business philosophy behind the introduction of the Boeing 747 by Pan American is bext expressed by the company's president. He says, "...Only about one per cent of the world's three and one half billion (people) have ever attached their derrieres to the seat of an airplane. That's a pretty big market for us to work on...we think there is a demand for...747s...All air transportation life is an investment in the future, some say a gamble. This one has been calculated as well as could be done, and it may take a while for the demand to catch up with the supply...."

History provides abundant evidence that where pioneers lead the way to something better all the world will quickly follow. Such will be the case with Pan Am and the 747.

SOVIET MISSILE ADVANCES

The signing of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties has done nothing to slow down Soviet weapons advancement. Recent reports indicate that the Kremlin is moving ahead rapidly in missile development.

According to U.S. officials, the Soviets have now tested an advanced guidance system for their new long- range submarine- launched missile (the Sawfly.) This system will improve the missile's accuracy.

The Soviets have also recently tested a new warhead for their intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) which will enable the missiles to enter the atmosphere much more rapidly, thereby improving accuracy and decreasing the likelihood of anti- ballistic missile interception.

Test flights have been made of a 200- mile missile with a special ground- scanning device which corrects the missile's course as it flies. This will greatly increase the accuracy of land- based ICBMs.

The Kremlin has developed a new luanching technique for its SS— 9s, the missile which could be used in a first strike against our country.

The Soviets have been working on defensive weapons, developing a new anti- ballistic missile with a new radar system. This missile will be very effective in stopping incoming missiles which might be launched by the U.S. after a Soviet attack. Analysis of recent satellite photos suggests that the Soviets have also begun construction of their first aircraft carrier, a 30,000 to 35,000- ton vessel with a full flight deck of 800 feet. All of these developments bode ill for the security our country. They suggest that the Soviets regard the SALT treaty the way they have regarded other treaties: as a political weapon, not as an agreement to be kept.

Inside Terror:
Govt. Invokes Civil Rights Law To Indict Muscle Union Chiefs Invading Hospitals, Nursing Homes

By Victor Riesel

NEW YORK-- Not too long ago, many men in white, and their nurses too, in a hospital and nursing home eomplex, were threatened with violence which would have turned them black and blue and bloody. Many of the medical aid staffs were imprisoned in hospital rooms for whole shifts. Warnings were hurled which the government and a federal grand jury have interpreted as warnings that patients would die.

All in the name of trade union organizing. It matters not that the union, Local 1115, Nursing Home, Hospital and Senior Citizens Hotel Employees union, is independent. It matters not that it was heaved out of the AFL— CIO because of its gruesome notoriety. It matters only that doctors, nurses, blue-collar and white- cap personnel were terrorized.

It matters only that the word union can be used because of archaic laws which hang over from the Rooseveltian era and which should be wiped off the law books.

It matters only that there are hundreds of such independent unions operating across the nation. They are empires unto themselves. Thus, a federal grand jury here, after an 18- month probe of Local 1115, guided by special attorney Jim Druker and Labor Dept. special compliance officer Sam Duke working with the Brooklyn Justice Dept. strike force, has indicted the union's president and five muscular business agents.

This president, Alex De. Laurentis, is a tough one. He and his band have just had the federal book thrown at them. The three- count indictment is only the second use of the old civil rights law known as Title 18, U.S. Code, Section 241.

The first use of the civil rights law in the trade union field came during the investigation of the 1969 triple Yablonski murders.

The use of Justice Dept. manpower, time, effort, and the scope of the probe into the miner's family tragedy is rivaling that of the Martin Luther King, Mr., assassination investigation. This statute opens the way for the federal government to move in where local authorities refuse or are unable to act. Or where state or local punishments just don't fit the crimes.

As a result of the use of this section, two men, mine union officials Albert Pass and William Prater, were indicted in the federal courts for conspiracy to violate federal laws prohibiting interference with the rights of a union member.

There were no murders in the De Laurentis offensive at the 2,000- bed medical complex on fashionable Long Island. But there was more than enough terror in order for the federals to move in.

De Laurentis's union, some time ago, spotted what is known as the Notey Hospital and Nursing Homes system-- worth some $40 million. The union began organizing the complex's three hospitals and three nursing homes.

One of the installations is known as Doctors Hospital. There, Local 1115 won a contract in 1968 covering the blue- collar employes. Still ambitious, De Laurentis, in early 1969, walked in on the system's executive director, Dr. Anton Notey, and told him the union wanted recognition as bargaining agent for all personnel in the hospital, except supervisors.

Dr. Notey was frightened. He recalled there had been a union representation dispute at the Central Island Nursing Home section of his complex where, according to investigators, De Laurentis is quoted as threatening to sabotage the buildings and facilities which would create conditions in which patients would die.

Dr. Notey was understandably anguished when De Laurentis moved in on Doctors Hospital. But he refused to yield.

So De Laurentis called a sit-in strike April 24, 1969, at the three hospitals in Dr. Notey's group.

The union chief and his men staked themselves at strategic points in the medical buildings. They forced blue collar workers into the hospital lecture rooms. The employes were forced to stay for their entire shift. They were told by the indicted men they would be harassed at their homes-- the union officials are quoted as saying they knew where the workers lived. And the workers were reminded by the business agents that failure to cooperate might result in tire slashings, broken windows and bodily harm.

All entrances to the hospitals were guarded by the organizers. So were all doors of the lecture halls. Workers were permitted to leave only to use the toilets-- under union guard. The sit- in lasted three days until Dr. Notey surrendered and signed. Virtually all demands were granted. De Laurentis also became foul-mouthed when served with a court injunction which he simply ignored.

At the same time federal authorities report that when registered nurses at the Central Island Nursing Home sought to decertify their unit from Local 1115, the union chief allegedly told Dr. Notey that hospital property such as boilers would be damaged and patients might die. The nurses were frightened. The certification petition was withdrawn.

There was more verbal gore. But it's no longer a private matter between the union and doctors and nurses. Now the men must stand trial for violating the rights of working people-- whether of hand or brain or both.

It's good to report that some forces are making a fight for decency. And that it is not always open season for terror.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Swivel- chair Generals

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON-- The armed forces have become top- heavy with brass. More and more officers are supervising fewer and fewer enlisted men. There are as many field grade officers today as in World War II, although they have only one-fifth of the men to command. Swivel- chair generals multiply in the Pentagon like rabbits.

It was perhaps inevitable, therefore, that the brass would spill over into the civilian branches of government. Tens of thousands of retired officers have taken civilian jobs in the federal bureaucracy.

We made a spot check on a typical general who has exchanged his military command for a civilian desk. He is Lt. Gen. Herman Nickerson, who was passed over for Marine Corpos commandant. As a consolation prize, he wangled a soft job as administrator of the prestigious National Credit Union Administration. This is the government agency that charters and oversees more than 11,000 credit unions from coast to coast.

General Nickerson, though less resplendent in mufti than military braid, behaves as if he had been appointed commandant. He is surrounded by a military retinue that he brought into the civilian agency with him-- three colonels, his former aide de camp and a sergeant. Commandant- like the general barks orders and expects instant obedience.

Although the NCUA is organized to "promote thrift" among credit unions, the general has surrounded himself with the lavish appurtenances of rank: a wide- screen television set for himself and his deputy administrator; a Mercury "Marquis" limousine with a telephone and a chauffeur; a Hi Fidelity stereo system which is also piped into his aide's office; deep pile rugs and overstuffed chairs; and an expensive, custom- made, hardwood stand- up signing desk.

When we dropped by the general's office his top personnel officer called over the intercom and asked anxiously: "Is the old man in a bad mood?" He was told the boss was busy.

For several days now, General Nickerson has been too busy to talk to us. But a spokesman told us in his behalf that all the furnishings were authorized by the General Services Administration. A GSA spokesman, however, said that the furnishings were selected from "an authorized list" but that "no specific authorization" was given to assemble so many fancy items in one office.

MORE JUNKETS

Those determined travelers, the congressional junketeers, are off again inspecting America's worldwide interests. As usual, they are contriving to arrange their overseas business at the world's pleasure spots.

We have already published several junketing accounts since Congress went out of session and freed its members to wander around the world. Here is another in the series:

Representative Richard Hanna, D— Calif., a seven league- boot globetrotter, is rushing through 12 countries in 26 days. He plans stopovers in such tourist capitals as Athens, Cairo, Madrid and Tokyo. It will be his first visit to these cities since August when he made a similar tour.

State Department cables reveal that Hanna may also travel to Jordan, Yemen and Saudi Arabia with friends he expects to meet in Beirut. The cables add that the congressman is authorized to draw the equivalent of $50 a day in local currencies to take care of his out- of- pocket expenses.

During the August junket, according to the cables, Hanna demanded the full red- carpet treatment, including a request for a military helicopter to lift him over the traffic jam that lesser tourists must cope with in Tokyo.

The congressman was traveling east to be [illegible] aide Tom Lankard explained that his boss is touring the same area to complete research on housing and to talk trade with the oil-rich nations of the Mideast. Hanna is "very concerned about the energy crisis," added Lankard.

Footnote: Representative Dante Fascell, D— Fla., has just concluded a quick "study mission" to Guatemala where his brother happens to work for AID. The congressman was accompanied by his wife but paid her expenses out of his own pocket. They stayed with his brother. During the visit, Fascell also attended the Inter-American Congress.

in the state and national campaigns just ended, many Democrats doubtfully hoped for the best, while fearing the worst.

And the worst, so far as Democrats were concerned, happened in both the Presidential and Missouri Governorship races. Neither result was much of a surprise.

Since then, reams of paper, and hours of air time have been wasted by observers who have tried to analyze the campaigns and explain what went wrong in those two races.

Some may be right, some wrong, but no one factor, no one action, no one person, can be blamed by we Democrats for what happened. There isn't much use to alibi.

The truth is that both President Nixon and Kit Bond created an image that the voters liked better than they did the image of McGovern and Dowd--regardless of whether we thing the public was right or wrong.

A further truth is that Nixon is as much our President and Bond our Governor as they are the President and Governor of those who supported them. This is our state and our nation, regardless of party affiliations, and both Democrats and Republicans have to live under the leaders the majority has chosen.

If two-thirds of the people of the nation, who voted for President Nixon, can live under his leadership, so can the rest of us. The same thought applies to Missouri and its new Governor, who incidentally is the first Northeast Missourian since Lloyd Stark to hold that high office. Prior to that, Northeast Missouri had its Gov. Elliott Major. Even though we may not have voted for Bond, we can be glad that he is from our area, and wish him well.

While we talk of preserving human resources and the environment, we're tolerating the emasculation of the one source of human betterment in the future -- science and technology. In a hard-hitting Address, Mr. Robert Anderson, president of North American Rockwell Corporation, a firm that has been dedicated to the aerospace program and the application of aerospace technology to civilian life, shows how through "scientific starvation" today we can become a second- rate nation tomorrow. Recent abdication of U. S. aircraft leadership to the U.S.S.R., France and Britain -- a leadership we have held for 40 years -- is but symbolic of a trend that has been set in motion by the sheer ignorance of antitechnology fanatics. Less than 1.5 cents of each national budget dollar go for space research and technology as contrasted to 42 cents for human resources, ad still the human resource extremists clamor for the cent and a half.

In Mr. Anderson's words, "Suppose we give in and abandon the national space program. Suppose we shut down the whole NASA establishment, and we leave Cape Kennedy to the swamps from which it emerged less than 20 years ago. Suppose we turn loose the engineers and scientists and technicians and wipe out hundreds of thousands of supporting jobs. Suppose we darken all the university laboratories that support our space research and development effort ... Does anyone seriously think that the United States, after that drastic action, would be a better place in which to live? That the poor would be less poor? That slums would disappear? That suddenly our rivers would be clean and our air as fresh and untainted as a Spring breeze?"

As a matter of demonstrable fact, Mr. Anderson shows with cold figures the opposite would be true. He praises the Administration's job-coupling program, designed to salvage underused technical talents. He notes that it, "... fits in precisely with a proposal already made (by his company for) ... a Federal Ready Reserve of aerospace professionals." The scientific and organizational abilities of these professionals are the best hope of the nation for a better tomorrow.

Many programs have problems with police. This is generally because the program has turned into a center for drug use, and because local law enforcement leaders were not appraised of plans for the center in advance of its opening. Avoid these mistakes. Keep the center clean; make it part of the working arrangement for all who staff it and use it. And by all means, consult closely with local law enforcement leaders and government officials.

THE STUFF OF

How often have you heard someone say, "They've got it made", in referring to some major business enterprise that perhaps had its inception in someone's basement as a one-man shop. The idea is prevalent that once a company gets out of the basement, figuratively speaking, and joins the "big time" its future is assured. As a matter of simple truth, this is pure fiction. No matter how big a company gets, its future is promising only so long as the same kind of ingenuity and management imagination that got it started in the first place stays with it through the ensuing years.

Coming through the year with a reasonable profit margin is a sweating- it- out proposition for a large company no less than a small one. In both cases, success and calculated risk go hand in hand. No better illustration of this can be found than in the pioneering step Pan American World Airways has taken in introducing the new Pan Am Boeing 747 Jet. It took the same courage and imagination for this airline company to commit a billion dollars to the 747 that it takes for a fledgling business enterprise to invest in a piece of equipment to the tune of a few thousand dollars that will start it on the way to becoming the "big" company of tomorrow.

The business philosophy behind the introduction of the Boeing 747 by Pan American is bext expressed by the company's president. He says, "...Only about one per cent of the world's three and one half billion (people) have ever attached their derrieres to the seat of an airplane. That's a pretty big market for us to work on...we think there is a demand for...747s...All air transportation life is an investment in the future, some say a gamble. This one has been calculated as well as could be done, and it may take a while for the demand to catch up with the supply...."

History provides abundant evidence that where pioneers lead the way to something better all the world will quickly follow. Such will be the case with Pan Am and the 747.

SOVIET MISSILE ADVANCES

The signing of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties has done nothing to slow down Soviet weapons advancement. Recent reports indicate that the Kremlin is moving ahead rapidly in missile development.

According to U.S. officials, the Soviets have now tested an advanced guidance system for their new long- range submarine- launched missile (the Sawfly.) This system will improve the missile's accuracy.

The Soviets have also recently tested a new warhead for their intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs) which will enable the missiles to enter the atmosphere much more rapidly, thereby improving accuracy and decreasing the likelihood of anti- ballistic missile interception.

Test flights have been made of a 200- mile missile with a special ground- scanning device which corrects the missile's course as it flies. This will greatly increase the accuracy of land- based ICBMs.

The Kremlin has developed a new luanching technique for its SS— 9s, the missile which could be used in a first strike against our country.

The Soviets have been working on defensive weapons, developing a new anti- ballistic missile with a new radar system. This missile will be very effective in stopping incoming missiles which might be launched by the U.S. after a Soviet attack. Analysis of recent satellite photos suggests that the Soviets have also begun construction of their first aircraft carrier, a 30,000 to 35,000- ton vessel with a full flight deck of 800 feet. All of these developments bode ill for the security our country. They suggest that the Soviets regard the SALT treaty the way they have regarded other treaties: as a political weapon, not as an agreement to be kept.

Inside Terror:
Govt. Invokes Civil Rights Law To Indict Muscle Union Chiefs Invading Hospitals, Nursing Homes

By Victor Riesel

NEW YORK-- Not too long ago, many men in white, and their nurses too, in a hospital and nursing home eomplex, were threatened with violence which would have turned them black and blue and bloody. Many of the medical aid staffs were imprisoned in hospital rooms for whole shifts. Warnings were hurled which the government and a federal grand jury have interpreted as warnings that patients would die.

All in the name of trade union organizing. It matters not that the union, Local 1115, Nursing Home, Hospital and Senior Citizens Hotel Employees union, is independent. It matters not that it was heaved out of the AFL— CIO because of its gruesome notoriety. It matters only that doctors, nurses, blue-collar and white- cap personnel were terrorized.

It matters only that the word union can be used because of archaic laws which hang over from the Rooseveltian era and which should be wiped off the law books.

It matters only that there are hundreds of such independent unions operating across the nation. They are empires unto themselves. Thus, a federal grand jury here, after an 18- month probe of Local 1115, guided by special attorney Jim Druker and Labor Dept. special compliance officer Sam Duke working with the Brooklyn Justice Dept. strike force, has indicted the union's president and five muscular business agents.

This president, Alex De. Laurentis, is a tough one. He and his band have just had the federal book thrown at them. The three- count indictment is only the second use of the old civil rights law known as Title 18, U.S. Code, Section 241.

The first use of the civil rights law in the trade union field came during the investigation of the 1969 triple Yablonski murders.

The use of Justice Dept. manpower, time, effort, and the scope of the probe into the miner's family tragedy is rivaling that of the Martin Luther King, Mr., assassination investigation. This statute opens the way for the federal government to move in where local authorities refuse or are unable to act. Or where state or local punishments just don't fit the crimes.

As a result of the use of this section, two men, mine union officials Albert Pass and William Prater, were indicted in the federal courts for conspiracy to violate federal laws prohibiting interference with the rights of a union member.

There were no murders in the De Laurentis offensive at the 2,000- bed medical complex on fashionable Long Island. But there was more than enough terror in order for the federals to move in.

De Laurentis's union, some time ago, spotted what is known as the Notey Hospital and Nursing Homes system-- worth some $40 million. The union began organizing the complex's three hospitals and three nursing homes.

One of the installations is known as Doctors Hospital. There, Local 1115 won a contract in 1968 covering the blue- collar employes. Still ambitious, De Laurentis, in early 1969, walked in on the system's executive director, Dr. Anton Notey, and told him the union wanted recognition as bargaining agent for all personnel in the hospital, except supervisors.

Dr. Notey was frightened. He recalled there had been a union representation dispute at the Central Island Nursing Home section of his complex where, according to investigators, De Laurentis is quoted as threatening to sabotage the buildings and facilities which would create conditions in which patients would die.

Dr. Notey was understandably anguished when De Laurentis moved in on Doctors Hospital. But he refused to yield.

So De Laurentis called a sit-in strike April 24, 1969, at the three hospitals in Dr. Notey's group.

The union chief and his men staked themselves at strategic points in the medical buildings. They forced blue collar workers into the hospital lecture rooms. The employes were forced to stay for their entire shift. They were told by the indicted men they would be harassed at their homes-- the union officials are quoted as saying they knew where the workers lived. And the workers were reminded by the business agents that failure to cooperate might result in tire slashings, broken windows and bodily harm.

All entrances to the hospitals were guarded by the organizers. So were all doors of the lecture halls. Workers were permitted to leave only to use the toilets-- under union guard. The sit- in lasted three days until Dr. Notey surrendered and signed. Virtually all demands were granted. De Laurentis also became foul-mouthed when served with a court injunction which he simply ignored.

At the same time federal authorities report that when registered nurses at the Central Island Nursing Home sought to decertify their unit from Local 1115, the union chief allegedly told Dr. Notey that hospital property such as boilers would be damaged and patients might die. The nurses were frightened. The certification petition was withdrawn.

There was more verbal gore. But it's no longer a private matter between the union and doctors and nurses. Now the men must stand trial for violating the rights of working people-- whether of hand or brain or both.

It's good to report that some forces are making a fight for decency. And that it is not always open season for terror.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Swivel- chair Generals

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON-- The armed forces have become top- heavy with brass. More and more officers are supervising fewer and fewer enlisted men. There are as many field grade officers today as in World War II, although they have only one-fifth of the men to command. Swivel- chair generals multiply in the Pentagon like rabbits.

It was perhaps inevitable, therefore, that the brass would spill over into the civilian branches of government. Tens of thousands of retired officers have taken civilian jobs in the federal bureaucracy.

We made a spot check on a typical general who has exchanged his military command for a civilian desk. He is Lt. Gen. Herman Nickerson, who was passed over for Marine Corpos commandant. As a consolation prize, he wangled a soft job as administrator of the prestigious National Credit Union Administration. This is the government agency that charters and oversees more than 11,000 credit unions from coast to coast.

General Nickerson, though less resplendent in mufti than military braid, behaves as if he had been appointed commandant. He is surrounded by a military retinue that he brought into the civilian agency with him-- three colonels, his former aide de camp and a sergeant. Commandant- like the general barks orders and expects instant obedience.

Although the NCUA is organized to "promote thrift" among credit unions, the general has surrounded himself with the lavish appurtenances of rank: a wide- screen television set for himself and his deputy administrator; a Mercury "Marquis" limousine with a telephone and a chauffeur; a Hi Fidelity stereo system which is also piped into his aide's office; deep pile rugs and overstuffed chairs; and an expensive, custom- made, hardwood stand- up signing desk.

When we dropped by the general's office his top personnel officer called over the intercom and asked anxiously: "Is the old man in a bad mood?" He was told the boss was busy.

For several days now, General Nickerson has been too busy to talk to us. But a spokesman told us in his behalf that all the furnishings were authorized by the General Services Administration. A GSA spokesman, however, said that the furnishings were selected from "an authorized list" but that "no specific authorization" was given to assemble so many fancy items in one office.

MORE JUNKETS

Those determined travelers, the congressional junketeers, are off again inspecting America's worldwide interests. As usual, they are contriving to arrange their overseas business at the world's pleasure spots.

We have already published several junketing accounts since Congress went out of session and freed its members to wander around the world. Here is another in the series:

Representative Richard Hanna, D— Calif., a seven league- boot globetrotter, is rushing through 12 countries in 26 days. He plans stopovers in such tourist capitals as Athens, Cairo, Madrid and Tokyo. It will be his first visit to these cities since August when he made a similar tour.

State Department cables reveal that Hanna may also travel to Jordan, Yemen and Saudi Arabia with friends he expects to meet in Beirut. The cables add that the congressman is authorized to draw the equivalent of $50 a day in local currencies to take care of his out- of- pocket expenses.

During the August junket, according to the cables, Hanna demanded the full red- carpet treatment, including a request for a military helicopter to lift him over the traffic jam that lesser tourists must cope with in Tokyo.

The congressman was traveling abroad to be reunited with aide Tom Lankard explained that his boss is touring the same area to complete research on housing and to talk trade with the oil-rich nations of the Mideast. Hanna is "very concerned about the energy crisis," added Lankard.

Footnote: Representative Dante Fascell, D— Fla., has just concluded a quick "study mission" to Guatemala where his brother happens to work for AID. The congressman was accompanied by his wife but paid her expenses out of his own pocket. They stayed with his brother. During the visit, Fascell also attended the Inter-American Congress.

Boyd and Williamson were also charged, along with Steven Charles Glass, James Leonard Coomer and Francis Wayne Maupin, with breaking into Nicken's Pharmacy in Bloomfield on Oct. 24. All had their case continued to January 5th.

Al Fish of Bloomfield was placed on probation for two years pleading guilty to charges of stealing two guns from the home of Walter Morlan in Bloomfield on Sept. 10.

What's the law?

The case of the bar-hopping client

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Mike was an attorney who was proud of his calling. But, what one of his clients was calling him, he didn't like. It seemed that the client was dissatisfied ith the manner in which Mike had disposed of a case for him and, passing through several bars, the client had voiced his opinion that Mike was a "nut" and a "screwball."

Taking exception to the client's characterization of him, Mike sued the client for defamation, claiming injury to his personal and professional reputation.

"A lawyer's reputation," Mike pointed out in court," is his most prized possession. To call him a 'nut' or a 'screwball' is like stabbing his reputation in the back. Instead of losing blood, however, he loses clients and that's terrible."

"He's got to be kidding," was the client's answer. "Calling a person a 'nut' or a 'screwball' isn't bad at all. In fact, some people even use those terms with great affection. Mike's just too sensitive. The is his reputation is now worse than it ever was."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the bar-hopping client pay Mike for defamation?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the terms "nut" and "screwball" do not connote disgrace or reprehensibility. At most, noted the judge, they are epithets describing a "peculiar or eccentric" person. And, the judge concluded, while the terms may be abusive, they amount to no more than harmless name calling and are not defamatory.

Truman's condition slightly improved

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Medical authorities noted improvement in former president Harry S. Truman's condition today, but kept him on the critical list at Research Hospital and Medical Center.

"The former president's cardiac situation is slightly improved as indicated by lowering of the pulse rate," Dr. Wallace Graham, the 88-tear-old Truman's physician said in a statement issued by the hospital.

"He is much calmer," the statement added. A spokesman said that meant he was less restless.

Truman's pulse was reported as 96 and regular. His temperature as of 10:15 a.m. EST at 100 degrees. The statement also reported "kidney function is adequate."

Dr. Graham also noted, "he continues to tolerate his tube feedings well, which are administered every four hours."

A hospital spokesman said that the tube feeding enabled Truman to receive nourishment--particularly protein-which could not be provided intravenously.

This morning's report suggested new evidence that Truman was doing his best to meet the challenge of numerous window signs that have appeared in the Kansas City area, urging "Give 'em Hell, Harry-Let's Get Well."

Truman's condition slightly improved

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Medical authorities noted improvement in former president Harry S. Truman's condition today, but kept him on the critical list at Research Hospital and Medical Center.

"The former president's cardiac situation is slightly improved as indicated by lowering of the pulse rate," Dr. Wallace Graham, the 88-tear-old Truman's physician said in a statement issued by the hospital.

"He is much calmer," the statement added. A spokesman said that meant he was less restless.

Truman's pulse was reported as 96 and regular. His temperature as of 10:15 a.m. EST at 100 degrees. The statement also reported "kidney function is adequate."

Dr. Graham also noted, "he continues to tolerate his tube feedings well, which are administered every four hours."

A hospital spokesman said that the tube feeding enabled Truman to receive nourishment--particularly protein-which could not be provided intravenously.

This morning's report suggested new evidence that Truman was doing his best to meet the challenge of numerous window signs that have appeared in the Kansas City area, urging "Give 'em Hell, Harry-Let's Get Well."

What's the law?

The case of the bar-hopping client

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Mike was an attorney who was proud of his calling. But, what one of his clients was calling him, he didn't like. It seemed that the client was dissatisfied ith the manner in which Mike had disposed of a case for him and, passing through several bars, the client had voiced his opinion that Mike was a "nut" and a "screwball."

Taking exception to the client's characterization of him, Mike sued the client for defamation, claiming injury to his personal and professional reputation.

"A lawyer's reputation," Mike pointed out in court," is his most prized possession. To call him a 'nut' or a 'screwball' is like stabbing his reputation in the back. Instead of losing blood, however, he loses clients and that's terrible."

"He's got to be kidding," was the client's answer. "Calling a person a 'nut' or a 'screwball' isn't bad at all. In fact, some people even use those terms with great affection. Mike's just too sensitive. The is his reputation is now worse than it ever was."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the bar-hopping client pay Mike for defamation?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the terms "nut" and "screwball" do not connote disgrace or reprehensibility. At most, noted the judge, they are epithets describing a "peculiar or eccentric" person. And, the judge concluded, while the terms may be abusive, they amount to no more than harmless name calling and are not defamatory.

Ann Landers

Mother of the bride not invited to shower

Dear Ann Landers: When my bride of over 25 years standing confirmed my suspicions and confessed to assorted extra- marital affairs I was not only shocked but devastated. The period of adjustment was difficult. I found it necessary to embrace not only a new set of values, but every female I could lay my hands on.

I found my new mode of life mildly astonishing. Before long I discovered that most women believe they are a combination of Mata Hari and Madame Pompadour. It took almost no effort to get every last one of them in bed. What's more, they passed the word to others and in no time I was unbelievably busy.

Now that I am an experienced old roue, I'd like to offer some sage advice to my married fellow man. Never pass up anything. If it's offered, take it. If it's available, get it. Your wife doesn't need all that time to clean the house and go shopping.--- Moon Over Miami

Dear Moon: I hope you can take a few minutes off from your sex life to read this. First, before you break your arm congratulating yourself, let me assure you that any man can find a woman to sleep with if he sets his standards low enough. The fact that you've been such a howling success as an alley cat does nothing to elevate you in the eyes of anyone worth impressing.

Dear Ann Landers: My parents have been divorced six years but they get along well on those special occasions when they meet. A big event is coming up. My oldest sister is getting married. It will be the first wedding in our family. Our aunt, who is my sister's godmother, is planning to give a big shower and this is the problem.

Aunt Alice is my father's sister. She and Mother do not get along. I thought that for this very special event, bygones would be bygones and everyone would be friendly, but such is not the case. Aunt Alice has not invited Mother to the shower. I told my sister (the bride) that this was rock bottom and that she should tell Aunt Alice that unless Mom is invited she will not allow a shower to be given.

My sister says "it's Aunt Alice's party and she can invite or leave out whomever she pleases." I have already made it clear that I will not attend unless Mom is invited. I believe the mother of the bride deserves to share the spotlight on such an occasion. Please comment.-- Upset

Dear Up: Here's a Landers Law of Long Standing: People who say, "If you invite so- and-so I'm not coming," should be told, "Sorry, we'll miss you." By the same token, no one has the right to insist-- under threat of boycott-- that a hostess include a guest who was not originally invited.

Dear Ann Landers: My sister- in- law claims she's never had a sick day in her life and does not believe in illness or medicine. Yet every time she turns around she is taking baking soda, or vinegar and water, sulfur and molasses, or some other kitchen remedy. I say she is medicating herself and she should stop pretending. Not a day goes by but what she doesn't mix up some concoction. Any advice for her?-- Concerned

Dear Con: She didn't ask me for any. And I'll bet she didn't ask you either. For the sake of those who might want my opinion: Chronic distress could by a symptom of a serious problem. Kitchen remedies might give temporary relief, but they don't solve any problems. A doctor should be consulted.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen- Age Sex-- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50c in coin and a long, self- addressed, stamped envelope to this newspaper.

One of four trees

Decorations of red, green, and gold are used by Mrs. Travis Shelby Jr. in the family room of her home on Highway 80 West in East Prairie. The lovely, green tree is only one of four trees in the Shelby home which may be viewed Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. during the Woman's Improvement Club Christmas Home Tour. Other homes included in the tour will be Mrs. Ray Melton, 203 Lombardy Drive, and Mrs. James Bruce Jr. at 204 Bill Pope Road.

Ann Landers

Mother of the bride not invited to shower

Dear Ann Landers: When my bride of over 25 years standing confirmed my suspicions and confessed to assorted extra- marital affairs I was not only shocked but devastated. The period of adjustment was difficult. I found it necessary to embrace not only a new set of values, but every female I could lay my hands on.

I found my new mode of life mildly astonishing. Before long I discovered that most women believe they are a combination of Mata Hari and Madame Pompadour. It took almost no effort to get every last one of them in bed. What's more, they passed the word to others and in no time I was unbelievably busy.

Now that I am an experienced old roue, I'd like to offer some sage advice to my married fellow man. Never pass up anything. If it's offered, take it. If it's available, get it. Your wife doesn't need all that time to clean the house and go shopping.--- Moon Over Miami

Dear Moon: I hope you can take a few minutes off from your sex life to read this. First, before you break your arm congratulating yourself, let me assure you that any man can find a woman to sleep with if he sets his standards low enough. The fact that you've been such a howling success as an alley cat does nothing to elevate you in the eyes of anyone worth impressing.

Dear Ann Landers: My parents have been divorced six years but they get along well on those special occasions when they meet. A big event is coming up. My oldest sister is getting married. It will be the first wedding in our family. Our aunt, who is my sister's godmother, is planning to give a big shower and this is the problem.

Aunt Alice is my father's sister. She and Mother do not get along. I thought that for this very special event, bygones would be bygones and everyone would be friendly, but such is not the case. Aunt Alice has not invited Mother to the shower. I told my sister (the bride) that this was rock bottom and that she should tell Aunt Alice that unless Mom is invited she will not allow a shower to be given.

My sister says "it's Aunt Alice's party and she can invite or leave out whomever she pleases." I have already made it clear that I will not attend unless Mom is invited. I believe the mother of the bride deserves to share the spotlight on such an occasion. Please comment.-- Upset

Dear Up: Here's a Landers Law of Long Standing: People who say, "If you invite so- and-so I'm not coming," should be told, "Sorry, we'll miss you." By the same token, no one has the right to insist-- under threat of boycott-- that a hostess include a guest who was not originally invited.

Dear Ann Landers: My sister- in- law claims she's never had a sick day in her life and does not believe in illness or medicine. Yet every time she turns around she is taking baking soda, or vinegar and water, sulfur and molasses, or some other kitchen remedy. I say she is medicating herself and she should stop pretending. Not a day goes by but what she doesn't mix up some concoction. Any advice for her?-- Concerned

Dear Con: She didn't ask me for any. And I'll bet she didn't ask you either. For the sake of those who might want my opinion: Chronic distress could by a symptom of a serious problem. Kitchen remedies might give temporary relief, but they don't solve any problems. A doctor should be consulted.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen- Age Sex-- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50c in coin and a long, self- addressed, stamped envelope to this newspaper.

Weather brings ducks

The extremely cold weather of the past week has done more than just make people miserable. It has driven down many ducks from the north and given Southeast Missouri duck hunters a chance to bag a few of their feathered friends from Canada before the season closes December 17.

Although there are many ducks in the area, there is also much water in the fields that the ducks can work in. With a little scouting and a lot of clothing, a trip to the fields in search of ducks may turn a cold and miserable morning into a delightful and satisfying outing.

1972 DEER SEASON

The 1972 Missouri gun deer season is a series of ifs, maybes and perhapses which will take some time to analyze-- but there's no doubt that it was a success.

The total harvest this year was down slightly from the 1971 all- time high of 31,722 to 29,597, but regulations were slightly more restrictive in 1972.

Deer managers at the Department of Conservation said the buck harvest was higher than anticipated (21,722), but the doe take was lower (7,875) during the final two days of any- deer hunting.

This could result in more deer statewide because of more does available to produce them. That was one of the reasons behind the two- day any- deer season in the Ozarks in 1972 compared to foud days in 1971. The deer herd in the Ozarks has grown slowly, but the range could sustain a larger herd and the more restrictive season this year could speed up growth of the Ozark deer herd.

"We'll have to analyze check station reports," says Dean Murphy, assistant Game Division chief. "We'll go day- by- day and compare buck and doe numbers with previous years and that should give us an idea of what effect the regulation had. We also will need to see what the postseason mail survey shows about hunting pressure."

Murphy said the season was both plagued and blessed by unusual weather. "On the first weekend, we had snow which probably lowered the take. Deer don't move as much in snow and many hunters left the woods.

"But snow on the ground during the week was ideal for hunters-- but many hunters were unable to hunt because of jobs. Then the second weekend was terrible as far as weather is concerned with rain and gusty winds."

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench will enter a hospital late today in preparation for surgery Monday for removal of a spot on his lung.

Bench, who was not available for comment, told friends he planned to enter the hospital after attending the Cincinnati Bengals-Cleveland Browns football game here this afternoon.

Bench, the National League's most valuable player in two of the past three seasons, had hoped the results of tests Wednesday would preclude the need for an operation.

"The tests performed on Johnny Bench were completed today and no new additional diagnosis has been made," said Reds team physician Dr. George Ballou, in a statement.

KELLY — Kelly put in a good team effort to take a Friday night win from Puxico, 82-43, with four players scoring in double figures.

Richard Urhahn won top honors with 20 points. Jeff Jackson, Mike Shelby and Ken Kern added 18, 15, and 10 respectively.

Puxico fell behind in the first quarter, letting Kelly slip ahead 18-10. Kelly extended its edge in the second quarter to 35-24 at half.

The Indians went cold in the second half but, for Kelly, it was a different story. The Scott Countians got hot in the third quarter and hit for 22 to Puxico's 10. The fourth quarter went about the same as Kelly marked up 26 and the Indians eight.

Mike Reed and Richar Smith both put in 10 for the Indians.

Kelly's B-team roared voer Puxico with a score of 78-35. Mike Braser had a good night with 24 points to pace the win. For the Indians, Hill and Hancock both had 10.

CLARKTON — The Clarkton Reindeer pulled one out of the fire by defeating the Southland Rebels 47-40 in a Dunklin County Conference game here Friday night.

Neither team could generate much of an offense in the early going, as poor shooting and numerous floor mistakes plagued both teams. At the end of the first quarter, Southland led 8-6. The second quarter was much the same story with Southland again outscoring the hosts to take a 24-18 halftime lead.

The third period found the visitors scoring just eight points, but holding the Reindeer to two, to give Southland a 32-20 advantage going into the final period. The final period found Clarkton a new ball team. After hitting on just four of 32 field goals in the first half, the Reindeer erupted for 27 points in the final period to take the victory, 47-40.

Kenny Rickman, 5-5 freshman, led the Reindeer with 16 points. John Horner led all Southland scorers with 11 points.

Clarkton also took the junior varsity contest, 43-22.

Kenneth McFarland scored 10 points for the junior Reindeer to take game honors. Danny Forbes led the Rebels with eight.

Weather brings ducks

The extremely cold weather of the past week has done more than just make people miserable. It has driven down many ducks from the north and given Southeast Missouri duck hunters a chance to bag a few of their feathered friends from Canada before the season closes December 17.

Although there are many ducks in the area, there is also much water in the fields that the ducks can work in. With a little scouting and a lot of clothing, a trip to the fields in search of ducks may turn a cold and miserable morning into a delightful and satisfying outing.

1972 DEER SEASON

The 1972 Missouri gun deer season is a series of ifs, maybes and perhapses which will take some time to analyze-- but there's no doubt that it was a success.

The total harvest this year was down slightly from the 1971 all- time high of 31,722 to 29,597, but regulations were slightly more restrictive in 1972.

Deer managers at the Department of Conservation said the buck harvest was higher than anticipated (21,722), but the doe take was lower (7,875) during the final two days of any- deer hunting.

This could result in more deer statewide because of more does available to produce them. That was one of the reasons behind the two- day any- deer season in the Ozarks in 1972 compared to foud days in 1971. The deer herd in the Ozarks has grown slowly, but the range could sustain a larger herd and the more restrictive season this year could speed up growth of the Ozark deer herd.

"We'll have to analyze check station reports," says Dean Murphy, assistant Game Division chief. "We'll go day- by- day and compare buck and doe numbers with previous years and that should give us an idea of what effect the regulation had. We also will need to see what the postseason mail survey shows about hunting pressure."

Murphy said the season was both plagued and blessed by unusual weather. "On the first weekend, we had snow which probably lowered the take. Deer don't move as much in snow and many hunters left the woods.

"But snow on the ground during the week was ideal for hunters- but many hunters were unable to hunt because of jobs. Then the second weekend was terrible as far as weather is concerned with rain and gusty winds."

CLARKTON — The Clarkton Reindeer pulled one out of the fire by defeating the Southland Rebels 47-40 in a Dunklin County Conference game here Friday night.

PARMA-- The Lilbourn Panthers strengthened their bid for the New Madrid County title with a 74- 56 conference victory over the Parma Pirates Friday night. The Panthers sport a 3- 0 conference record and are 3- 1 over- all. The Pirates are 4- 3 for the season and 0- 1 in the conference.

Lack of defense continued to plague the Pirates who were unable to stop the patented Panther fast break. Time and again in the second half the visitors from Lilbourn scored easy buckets on the fast break after literally dribbling "through" the proous Parma defense.

The game started as a low- scoring affair even though both teams are noted for run- and- gun high- scoring offenses. Lilbourn led at the end of the first quarter, 16- 12, and at halftime, 30- 24.

The second half found the Panther offense scoring at ease against the Pirates, who were rated 10th in The Daily Standard pre- season poll. Lilbourn scored 23 points in the third quarter while holding the hosts to 14. Lilbourn refused to let up in the final period, scoring 21 big points to coast in with the victory.

Tom Mashmeyer led Lilbourn scoring with 16 points. Grant Dambach and Frankie Robinson, a freshmen, added 14 points apiece for the Panthers.

Rufus Barnes pumped in 23 points to take game honors for Parma. Rolly Perkins added 15 for the Pirates.

Lilbourn's undefeated B- team continued its winning ways with a 55- 37 victory over the junior Pirates. Ernest Hubrins scored 14 points for Lilbourn. Clarence Office scored 11 points to lead Parma scorers.

Hornets win 20 straight

ADVANCE-- Coach Carroll Cookson's Advance Hornets kept their winning streak intact with a 62- 59 come- from- behind victory Friday night for their 20th win in a row over the Notre Dame Bulldogs and a 9- 0 this year.

The defending class S state champion Hornets, behind few times in the past two seasons, failed to penetrate the Notre Dame defense in the first quarter and trailed 16- 8 at the end of the period. The second frame found the host Hornets beginning to find the range but unable to cut into the Bulldog lead, as Notre Dame poured in 21 points to Advance's 20 for a 37- 28 halftime lead.

Cookson must have come up with the right formula at the half because the Hornets came out redhot in the third quarter, outscoring the visitors 24- 12 to send the Hornets into a 52- 49 lead going into the final period. Both teams scored 10 points in the final period to save the Hornets a hard- fought victory.

The Hornets, rated third in the latest Daily Standard poll, were led in scoring by Darrel Croy with 20 points and Terry Wills with 16. Dave Nenninger scored 19 points and Paul Dirnberger added 13 for the Bulldogs who narrowly missed pulling off one of the biggest upsets of the season.

LHS inches closer to title

PARMA-- The Lilbourn Panthers strengthened their bid for the New Madrid County title with a 74- 56 conference victory over the Parma Pirates Friday night. The Panthers sport a 3- 0 conference record and are 3- 1 over- all. The Pirates are 4- 3 for the season and 0- 1 in the conference.

Lack of defense continued to plague the Pirates who were unable to stop the patented Panther fast break. Time and again in the second half the visitors from Lilbourn scored easy buckets on the fast break after literally dribbling "through" the proous Parma defense.

The game started as a low- scoring affair even though both teams are noted for run- and- gun high-scoring offenses. Lilbourn led at the end of the first quarter, 16- 12, and at halftime, 30- 24.

The second half found the Panther offense scoring at ease against the Pirates, who were rated 10th in The Daily Standard pre- season poll. Lilbourn scored 23 points in the third quarter while holding the hosts to 14. Lilbourn refused to let up in the final period, scoring 21 big points to coast in with the victory.

Tom Mashmeyer led Lilbourn scoring with 16 points. Grant Dambach and Frankie Robinson, a freshmen, added 14 points apiece for the Panthers.

Rufus Barnes pumped in 23 points to take game honors for Parma. Rolly Perkins added 15 for the Pirates.

Lilbourn's undefeated B-team continued its winning ways with a 55- 37 victory over the junior Pirates. Ernest Hubrins scored 14 points for Lilbourn. Clarence Office scored 11 points to lead Parma scorers.

Hornets win 20 straight

ADVANCE-- Coach Carroll Cookson's Advance Hornets kept their winning streak intact with a 62- 59 come- from- behind victory Friday night for their 20th win in a row over the Notre Dame Bulldogs and a 9- 0 this year.

The defending class S state champion Hornets, behind few times in the past two seasons, failed to penetrate the Notre Dame defense in the first quarter and trailed 16- 8 at the end of the period. The second frame found the host Hornets beginning to find the range but unable to cut into the Bulldog lead, as Notre Dame poured in 21 points to Advance's 20 for a 37- 28 halftime lead.

Cookson must have come up with the right formula at the half because the Hornets came out redhot in the third quarter, outscoring the visitors 24- 12 to send the Hornets into a 52- 49 lead going into the final period. Both teams scored 10 points in the final period to save the Hornets a hard- fought victory.

The Hornets, rated third in the latest Daily Standard poll, were led in scoring by Darrel Croy with 20 points and Terry Wills with 16. Dave Nenninger scored 19 points and Paul Dirnberger added 13 for the Bulldogs who narrowly missed pulling off one of the biggest upsets of the season.

Advance also took the junior varsity contest, 45- 35, behind the 15- point scoring of Ron Oller and the 13- point production of Joe Cummins. Tommy Dirnberger led the junior Dogs with 11 points.

Santa and the ICE KING

by Lucrece Beale

Down, down, down Oonik plunged toward the black water

SYNOPSIS: The Eskimo festival failed to lift the continuous winter from the Eskimo lands. Although Miski the wise man says nothing more can be done, Oonik the Eskimo boy is determined to try another plan.

CHAPTER THREE
STORM AT SEA

With Keotuk at his heels Oonik ran home. He found his sled frozen to the side of the igloo. With his snow knife he cut it free. The sled was made of bone and pieces of driftwood, with reindeer antlers as a handle. It was small but sturdy.

He harnessed Keotuk and tied his snow saw and seal spear on to the sled. Then he returned to the wise man's igloo where all the Eskimos of the Village were gathered.

"Father," said Oonik, touching his father's arm. "Is it true that on the far side of the Arctic Sea is Santa Land?"

His father nodded. "So I have always heard."

"Then," said Oonik, "I am going there."

"What are you saying?" cried his father in astonishment.

"Santa Claus is very powerful," said Oonik. "He knows when I have been good and when I have been bad. He knows what to bring me for Christmas. He always comes every Christmas Eve no matter how stormy the weather."

"So?" said his father.

"So," said Oonik, "if Santa can do all these things he can surely cure the Ice King of his rage. I will go and ask his help."

"Son," said the father, "you could never get to Santa Land. It is too far and the storms come too fast and too often. You would die."

"If I stay here we all will die," replied Oonik. "Please, father. My sled is fast and Keotuk is the best dog in the village."

Miski, the wise man, put his hand on Oonik's shoulder. "You are brave and wise," he murmured. He turned to the father. "Let him go," he said. "It is our only chance."

Oonik's father saw that this was so. "Go, then," he said, sadly. "Perhaps your small weight and fast sled will help you make it where no one else could."

Oonik ran out to his sled. "Go, Keotuk!" he cried.

Slipping and falling, Keotuk slowly hauled the sled up the ice mountain and down to the frozen sea. It would be hard to say how many days Oonik traveled. Since it was a summer month (despite the cold) there was no night for, in Eskimo land, the summer is a time of never-ending day just as in the wintertime there is never-ending night. Finally he saw mountains ahead.

"Not much further," he cried cheerily to the dog. "When we get to the mountains we'll be in Santa Land."

But, though Keotuk pulled on and on, they never seemed to get any closer and after a while storm clouds came down low over the sea and Oonik could not even see the mountains any more.

"This is going to be a big storm," he murmured as he anxiously studied the lowering sky. "We'd better stop."

He was especially careful digging his snow cave. He made it large and deep and when he and Keotuk were safely in he turned the sled on its side and pulled it against the opening to keep out the wind. He had hardly finished when the full might of the Ice King's fury burst down upon the sea.

But Oonik didn't care. He snuggled against Keotuk's warm fur and fell asleep.

He was awakened by a terrible noise of crashing ice. He was thrown across the cave and Keotuk came tumbling after him. Then they both slid to the top of the cave. Horrified, Oonik saw that the cave was collapsing.

The ice field on which the cave was had been broken into pieces and now the huge chunks of ice were grinding together, crumbling and piling on top of one another like toy blocks tossed about by a playful giant.

Shaking with fright, Oonik suddenly felt the cave being lifted into the air. Then, midst a thousand tons of ice, the cave burst open and Oonik was sliding down an enormous slab of ice.

WANT ADS THE ACTION WAY!

Santa and the ICE KING

by Lucrece Beale

Down, down, down Oonik plunged toward the black water

SYNOPSIS: The Eskimo festival failed to lift the continuous winter from the Eskimo lands. Although Miski the wise man says nothing more can be done, Oonik the Eskimo boy is determined to try another plan.

CHAPTER THREE
STORM AT SEA

With Keotuk at his heels Oonik ran home. He found his sled frozen to the side of the igloo. With his snow knife he cut it free. The sled was made of bone and pieces of driftwood, with reindeer antlers as a handle. It was small but sturdy.

He harnessed Keotuk and tied his snow saw and seal spear on to the sled. Then he returned to the wise man's igloo where all the Eskimos of the Village were gathered.

"Father," said Oonik, touching his father's arm. "Is it true that on the far side of the Arctic Sea is Santa Land?"

His father nodded. "So I have always heard."

"Then," said Oonik, "I am going there."

"What are you saying?" cried his father in astonishment.

"Santa Claus is very powerful," said Oonik. "He knows when I have been good and when I have been bad. He knows what to bring me for Christmas. He always comes every Christmas Eve no matter how stormy the weather."

"So?" said his father.

"So," said Oonik, "if Santa can do all these things he can surely cure the Ice King of his rage. I will go and ask his help."

"Son," said the father, "you could never get to Santa Land. It is too far and the storms come too fast and too often. You would die."

"If I stay here we all will die," replied Oonik. "Please, father. My sled is fast and Keotuk is the best dog in the village."

Miski, the wise man, put his hand on Oonik's shoulder. "You are brave and wise," he murmured. He turned to the father. "Let him go," he said. "It is our only chance."

Oonik's father saw that this was so. "Go, then," he said, sadly. "Perhaps your small weight and fast sled will help you make it where no one else could."

Oonik ran out to his sled. "Go, Keotuk!" he cried.

Slipping and falling, Keotuk slowly hauled the sled up the ice mountain and down to the frozen sea. It would be hard to say how many days Oonik traveled. Since it was a summer month (despite the cold) there was no night for, in Eskimo land, the summer is a time of never-ending day just as in the wintertime there is never-ending night. Finally he saw mountains ahead.

"Not much further," he cried cheerily to the dog. "When we get to the mountains we'll be in Santa Land."

But, though Keotuk pulled on and on, they never seemed to get any closer and after a while storm clouds came down low over the sea and Oonik could not even see the mountains any more.

"This is going to be a big storm," he murmured as he anxiously studied the lowering sky. "We'd better stop."

He was especially careful digging his snow cave. He made it large and deep and when he and Keotuk were safely in he turned the sled on its side and pulled it against the opening to keep out the wind. He had hardly finished when the full might of the Ice King's fury burst down upon the sea.

But Oonik didn't care. He snuggled against Keotuk's warm fur and fell asleep.

He was awakened by a terrible noise of crashing ice. He was thrown across the cave and Keotuk came tumbling after him. Then they both slid to the top of the cave. Horrified, Oonik saw that the cave was collapsing.

The ice field on which the cave was had been broken into pieces and now the huge chunks of ice were grinding together, crumbling and piling on top of one another like toy blocks tossed about by a playful giant.

Shaking with fright, Oonik suddenly felt the cave being lifted into the air. Then, midst a thousand tons of ice, the cave burst open and Oonik was sliding down an enormous slab of ice.

Clippard named Chairman of Bootheel Development

MALDEN— Percy Clippard of Dexter was appointed (Dec. 6) chairman of the Bootheel Industrial Development Council at Tuesday night's board meeting at the council office in Malden.

Clippard succeeds Marion Waggener of Charleston as chairman of the six- county council.

Also appointed to the new executive committee were Charles Royal of Malden as vice chairman; Sam Hunter of New Madrid, Frank Ferrell of Sikeston, Lonnie Kinchen of Kennett, Duane Hichie of Hayti, Bob Robins of Dexter and Waggener., Charleston.

Clippard announced the resignation of Pat Lewis, industrial development specialist from Malden. Clippard said Lewis plans to enter a real estate firm in Mississippi. Lewis was thanked for his efforts in organizing the program.

Lewis reported on the activities of the staff during the past month. He said that a regional industrial brochure is being prepared along with information concerning available industrial buildings, labor, market potentials and transportation. Once the brochure is completed a concentrated effort should be made to make the Bootheel and its location advantages known to industrialists, Lewis said.

He added that lack of natural gas for industrial use is of primary importance and one of the problems in the Bootheel. Also of importance, and a deficiency that can be corrected, is the lack of effective local organizations concerned with industrial development in most Bootheel communities, Lewis said.

New historic place

The Missouri Pacific depot at Charleston has been approved by the National Park Service of the Department of Interior to be added to the National Register of Historic places. The depot was constructed in 1917.

Depot is historic site

CHARLESTON — The Missouri- Pacific Railroad depot has been approved by the National Park Service of the Department of Interior to be added to the National Register of Historic Places, Missouri Sens. Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton and 10th District Rep. Bill Burlison announced today.

Purchased in June of 1971 by the Mississippi County Historical Society for development as a historical museum, the depot will house a collection of gubernatorial papers and memorabilia which will be given to his home county by Governor Warren E. Hearnes.

The Charleston depot marks a once bustling intersection of two branches of the Missouri- Pacific Railroad at Charleston, the Cairo and Fulton line and the Bellmont branch of the St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad. It is considered typical of Missouri Pacific Railroad stations built in the first 20 years of the 20th Century.

Constructed at a cost of $25,000 in 1917, the Charleston station replaced an earlier depot which dated back to the 1860s.

Trading up

HAYTI — Trading on Missouri cotton markets picked up slightly from the previous week, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Hayti Classing Office. Demandfor uncommitted cotton remained fairly good as most of the current ginnings were delivered on previously drawn contracts.

Prices offered were mostly steady as farmers sold a small volume of cotton. Farmers sold lots of low middling (51) staple 34 at prices averaging 25 cents per pound. Mixed lots of strict good ordinary (61) staple 34 and lower grades sold at prices ranging from 20 to 22 cents per pound.

Ginners continued to pay farmers an average of $43 per ton for cottonseed.

Cotton harvesting continued the trend of past weeks with farmers picking wherever possible between rains. ONly a small amount of cotton was picked before heavy rains fell over the weekend. A season's total of 360,000 samples were classed by the Agriculutral Marketing Service's Hayti Classing Office through Friday.

Grades of the samples classed last week were almost unchanged from the previous week while staples were shorter. Seventy- seven per cent graded low middling (51) compared to 80 per cent last week. Strict good ordinary (61) made up eight per cent of the samples against seven per cent a week ago. Sixty percent of the samples stapled 33 while 39 per cent stapled 34.

Ninety- four percent of the samples miked in the desired 3.5 to 4.9 range. Breaking strength averaged 80,000 pounds per square inch on the samples tasted.

It's time to evaluate weed control practices

By THOMAS A. BROWN JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

If you are a farmer, now is an excellent time to evaluate the weed control practices used this year. Weeds are especially a problem at harvest time, so farmers are well aware of their weed problems now.

In making such an evaluation, you will, no doubt, come up with some answers as to which chemicals worked best, what you did wrong in case of poor results, and what you did in cases where good results were obtained.

In case of poor results, you will probably have some idea as to the reason why. Let's consider some factors commonly found to be responsible for poor chemical weed control results.

One thing often found to be at fault when poor results are obtained is that the farmer used a chemical that would not produce the desired results. Some herbicides will control certain weeds while other herbicides will control others.

In order to be assured of getting the desired results inasmuch as possible, we suggest using chemicals that are recommended by the University of Missouri Colelge of Agriculture. Before a chemical is recommended by the college, it is tested in experimental plots for a number of years so that a farmer can be pretty well assured of getting good results if the chemical is properly applied and weather conditions are favorable.

In order to be recommended, a chemical must also meet the label requirements established by the U. S. Department of Agriculture upon the basis of findings of the Pure Food and Drug Administration, so that a farmer will know that it is safe for use for the purpose for which it is recommended.

As this indicates, it behooves farmers to keep informed concerning weed control chemicals, how each should be used, and what can be expected of each.

Improper timing of herbicide applications is often found to be responsible for poor chemical weed control results. Herbicidal oils, for example, will give good results as an early- season post emergence weed control treatment in cotton if used when weeds and grasses are small. Very often, farmers are disappointed with ther esults obtained, however, because they wait too late to apply the oil.

Weather is a definite factor in determining the kind of results that might be expected from the use of weed control chemicals. A number of local cotton farmers have learned, for example, that they cannot expect good results from the use of Diuron (Karmex) as a pre- emergence weed control treatment unless they get rain within 10 days of application.

Temperature is also an important factor in determining when to apply certain chemiclas. For example, several farmers have learned the hard way that satisfactory results cannot be expected from the user of DSMA as an early season post-emergence treatment for cotton unless the air temperature is 80 degrees or above.

Very often, when a farmer obtains poor results from the use of a weed control chemical, we dind that he has not applied the proper amount of chemical. If too little chemical is applied, only poor weed control results can be expected. If too much is applied, not only is money wasted, but damage to the crop may be the result. It is tremendously important that the sprayer be carefully calibrated to apply the proper amount.

Information as to how to calibrate sprayers may be obtained form county university extension centers.

Poor seedbed preparation is often a common reason for poor results from the use of weed control chemicals. If you have a cloddy soil surface as a result of poor seedbed preparation, the clods will deflect the chemical that hits them as it is applied so that some space will be left untreated around the clods. This will result in poor coverage which means that weeds and grasses can come up in these untreated spots.

Trifluralin (Treflan) and Nitralin (Planavin) should be incorporated into the soil for best results. Poor incorporation has been responsible when poor weed control results have been obtained from its use in cotton and soybeans in many cases. It is therefore important that these chemicals be thoroughly mixed into the soil; therefore, it should be done as thoroughly as possible and by the use of the proper equipment.

Finally, farmers fail to get good weed control results in many cases because the weed in question germinates too deeply for chemicals to reach them. For example, cocklebur seed often germinate two inches or more in the soil whereas pre- emergence chemicals are usaully effective only in the top one- half to three- fourths inch of soil. Most pre- emergence chemicals have to get weeds in the germinating stage or else they will not kill them.

A careful evaluation of this year's weed control problems will do much to help you to obtain more effective weed control in the future.

It is very important that the farmer do what he can to help insure good results from the use of weed control chemicals. Time spent in the evaluation of weed control practices used this year will pay good dividends in the future.

Bond picks staff head

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov.-elect Christopher S. Bond has picked an old friend from his hometown of Mexico, Mo., to be chief of the governor's office staff.

He is Alan Woods, 27, who is a partner in a Washington investment research firm and lives in Alexandria, Va.

Woods managed Bond's successful campaign for state auditor in 1970 and also worked in his 1972 campaign for governor.

Smith claims generalizations in clean water regulations

The problem with anti-pollution and clear water regulations being promoted on a national scale is that there is too much generalization, Dr. George Smith, director of the Water Research Center in Columbia, told soil and water conservation enthusiasts at Ramada Inn Friday night.

Smith, who has also directed soil fertility research in Southeast Missouri for several years, spoke at the third annual dinner meeting of the Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District.

He said rural America is being unjustly blamed for many of the pollution problems.

As far as water is concerned, the greatest polluters from agriculture are nutrients. The same nutrients that cause moss and algae to grow, also cause crops to grow, he said. "We need to know where the pollution is coming from before placing the blame.', he noted.

Smith showed a series of color slides, indicating that many of the nation's major sources of air and water pollution originate in urban areas. These include industrial waste, automobile exhaust fumes, salt on streets during cold weather and dumping of residue in lakes and rivers by large manufacturing companies.

He warned against lumping everything into "one basket," meaning that what will apply to the problems of the highly populated areas will not necessarily work in the less populated rural areas.

Southeast Missouri should not have to suffer for the problems caused by St. Louis, New York or Los Angleles, he said

What actually comes from natural compounds and what is synthetic? "I believe we are getting enough evidence to show that if technology is used as it should be, the farmer hasn't much to be concerned about," Smith said.

In reference to the amount of nitrate runoff collecting in water sources and consequently showing up in some of the food, Smith said that when a farmer goes beyond what the crop requires when using herbicides, insecticides or fertilizers, then he is vulnerable. That farmer may have to shoot for 95 per cent optimum yield instead of 100 per cent to stay on the safe side, Smith noted.

In answer to urban critics of the farmer and his use of artificial nutrients, Smith said the farmer actually improves his environment. Using a corn crop as an example, Smith said the crop produces much more oxygen than it uses and thus provides an ample oxyten supply for a number of persons that would not otherwise have been available.

Scott conservation needs inventoried

By DON BENEFIELD
Soil Conservation Officer

BENTON — Planning for the wise use of the land in Scott County requires good soil and water conservation measures. Soil and water conservation is protecting, using, maintaining and improving the land and water resources to best serve the people, both private and public, to provide food fiber, forest products, recreation and wildlife resources now and in the future.

There are 248,985 acres in Scott County. Of this total land area, 76 per cent is cropland, nine per cent is forest, four per cent pasture and 11 per cent is urban, water and highways. Of the 76 per cent in cropland, 54 per cent needs drainage and 28 per cent needs an annual cover. About 93 per cent of all the land in Scott County requires some type of conservation measure.

Pastures in the county need protection and improvement. Around 46 per cent of the pastures need a rotation system set up to protect them, with 22 per cent needing improvement by fertilization, reseeding or brush and weed control.

The production of our forest in the county is very low compared to what it could be if managed properly. Seventy per cent of all the forests need timber stand improvement by killing out undesirable and weed trees. Up to 25 per cent of the forests are not properly stocked and need reinforcement by replanting.

Only seven per cent of the land produces at full capacity without applying any conservation measures.

For free technical assistance with your conservation needs, contact the Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District.

Carl Todt, Southeast Association fieldman, reports the top herd for October is Clem Schabbing of Cape Girardeau with butterfat of 1.5 pounds in 29.9 pounds of milk. Following Schabbing was Albert Gross of Gordonville with an average of 1.4 pounds of butterfat in 39.3 pounds of milk.

Third place went to Siemers Farms, Inc. of Gordonville for production of 1.3 pounds of butterfat in 33.2 pounds of milk, followed closely by Norman Brase of Gordonville with 1.3 pounds of butterfat in 32.2 pounds of milk. Clippard named Chairman of Bootheel Development

MALDEN— Percy Clippard of Dexter was appointed (Dec. 6) chairman of the Bootheel Industrial Development Council at Tuesday night's board meeting at the council office in Malden.

Clippard succeeds Marion Waggener of Charleston as chairman of the six- county council.

Also appointed to the new executive committee were Charles Royal of Malden as vice chairman; Sam Hunter of New Madrid, Frank Ferrell of Sikeston, Lonnie Kinchen of Kennett, Duane Hichie of Hayti, Bob Robins of Dexter and Waggener., Charleston.

Clippard announced the resignation of Pat Lewis, industrial development specialist from Malden. Clippard said Lewis plans to enter a real estate firm in Mississippi. Lewis was thanked for his efforts in organizing the program.

Lewis reported on the activities of the staff during the past month. He said that a regional industrial brochure is being prepared along with information concerning available industrial buildings, labor, market potentials and transportation. Once the brochure is completed a concentrated effort should be made to make the Bootheel and its location advantages known to industrialists, Lewis said.

He added that lack of natural gas for industrial use is of primary importance and one of the problems in the Bootheel. Also of importance, and a deficiency that can be corrected, is the lack of effective local organizations concerned with industrial development in most Bootheel communities, Lewis said.

Trading up

HAYTI — Trading on Missouri cotton markets picked up slightly from the previous week, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Hayti Classing Office. Demandfor uncommitted cotton remained fairly good as most of the current ginnings were delivered on previously drawn contracts.

Prices offered were mostly steady as farmers sold a small volume of cotton. Farmers sold lots of low middling (51) staple 34 at prices averaging 25 cents per pound. Mixed lots of strict good ordinary (61) staple 34 and lower grades sold at prices ranging from 20 to 22 cents per pound.

Ginners continued to pay farmers an average of $43 per ton for cottonseed.

Cotton harvesting continued the trend of past weeks with farmers picking wherever possible between rains. ONly a small amount of cotton was picked before heavy rains fell over the weekend. A season's total of 360,000 samples were classed by the Agriculutral Marketing Service's Hayti Classing Office through Friday.

Grades of the samples classed last week were almost unchanged from the previous week while staples were shorter. Seventy- seven per cent graded low middling (51) compared to 80 per cent last week. Strict good ordinary (61) made up eight per cent of the samples against seven per cent a week ago. Sixty percent of the samples stapled 33 while 39 per cent stapled 34.

Ninety- four percent of the samples miked in the desired 3.5 to 4.9 range. Breaking strength averaged 80,000 pounds per square inch on the samples tasted.

New historic place

The Missouri Pacific depot at Charleston has been approved by the National Park Service of the Department of Interior to be added to the National Register of Historic places. The depot was constructed in 1917.

Depot is historic site

CHARLESTON — The Missouri- Pacific Railroad depot has been approved by the National Park Service of the Department of Interior to be added to the National Register of Historic Places, Missouri Sens. Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton and 10th District Rep. Bill Burlison announced today.

Purchased in June of 1971 by the Mississippi County Historical Society for development as a historical museum, the depot will house a collection of gubernatorial papers and memorabilia which will be given to his home county by Governor Warren E. Hearnes.

The Charleston depot marks a once bustling intersection of two branches of the Missouri- Pacific Railroad at Charleston, the Cairo and Fulton line and the Bellmont branch of the St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad. It is considered typical of Missouri Pacific Railroad stations built in the first 20 years of the 20th Century.

Constructed at a cost of $25,000 in 1917, the Charleston station replaced an earlier depot which dated back to the 1860s.

It's time to evaluate weed control practices

By THOMAS A. BROWN JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

If you are a farmer, now is an excellent time to evaluate the weed control practices used this year. Weeds are especially a problem at harvest time, so farmers are well aware of their weed problems now.

In making such an evaluation, you will, no doubt, come up with some answers as to which chemicals worked best, what you did wrong in case of poor results, and what you did in cases where good results were obtained.

In case of poor results, you will probably have some idea as to the reason why. Let's consider some factors commonly found to be responsible for poor chemical weed control results.

One thing often found to be at fault when poor results are obtained is that the farmer used a chemical that would not produce the desired results. Some herbicides will control certain weeds while other herbicides will control others.

In order to be assured of getting the desired results inasmuch as possible, we suggest using chemicals that are recommended by the University of Missouri Colelge of Agriculture. Before a chemical is recommended by the college, it is tested in experimental plots for a number of years so that a farmer can be pretty well assured of getting good results if the chemical is properly applied and weather conditions are favorable.

In order to be recommended, a chemical must also meet the label requirements established by the U. S. Department of Agriculture upon the basis of findings of the Pure Food and Drug Administration, so that a farmer will know that it is safe for use for the purpose for which it is recommended.

As this indicates, it behooves farmers to keep informed concerning weed control chemicals, how each should be used, and what can be expected of each.

Improper timing of herbicide applications is often found to be responsible for poor chemical weed control results. Herbicidal oils, for example, will give good results as an early- season post emergence weed control treatment in cotton if used when weeds and grasses are small. Very often, farmers are disappointed with ther esults obtained, however, because they wait too late to apply the oil.

Weather is a definite factor in determining the kind of results that might be expected from the use of weed control chemicals. A number of local cotton farmers have learned, for example, that they cannot expect good results from the use of Diuron (Karmex) as a pre- emergence weed control treatment unless they get rain within 10 days of application.

Temperature is also an important factor in determining when to apply certain chemiclas. For example, several farmers have learned the hard way that satisfactory results cannot be expected from the user of DSMA as an early season post-emergence treatment for cotton unless the air temperature is 80 degrees or above.

Very often, when a farmer obtains poor results from the use of a weed control chemical, we dind that he has not applied the proper amount of chemical. If too little chemical is applied, only poor weed control results can be expected. If too much is applied, not only is money wasted, but damage to the crop may be the result. It is tremendously important that the sprayer be carefully calibrated to apply the proper amount.

Information as to how to calibrate sprayers may be obtained form county university extension centers.

Poor seedbed preparation is often a common reason for poor results from the use of weed control chemicals. If you have a cloddy soil surface as a result of poor seedbed preparation, the clods will deflect the chemical that hits them as it is applied so that some space will be left untreated around the clods. This will result in poor coverage which means that weeds and grasses can come up in these untreated spots.

Trifluralin (Treflan) and Nitralin (Planavin) should be incorporated into the soil for best results. Poor incorporation has been responsible when poor weed control results have been obtained from its use in cotton and soybeans in many cases. It is therefore important that these chemicals be thoroughly mixed into the soil; therefore, it should be done as thoroughly as possible and by the use of the proper equipment.

Finally, farmers fail to get good weed control results in many cases because the weed in question germinates too deeply for chemicals to reach them. For example, cocklebur seed often germinate two inches or more in the soil whereas pre- emergence chemicals are usaully effective only in the top one- half to three- fourths inch of soil. Most pre- emergence chemicals have to get weeds in the germinating stage or else they will not kill them.

A careful evaluation of this year's weed control problems will do much to help you to obtain more effective weed control in the future.

It is very important that the farmer do what he can to help insure good results from the use of weed control chemicals. Time spent in the evaluation of weed control practices used this year will pay good dividends in the future.

Smith claims generalizations in clean water regulations

The problem with anti-pollution and clear water regulations being promoted on a national scale is that there is too much generalization, Dr. George Smith, director of the Water Research Center in Columbia, told soil and water conservation enthusiasts at Ramada Inn Friday night.

Smith, who has also directed soil fertility research in Southeast Missouri for several years, spoke at the third annual dinner meeting of the Scott County Soil and Water Conservation District.

He said rural America is being unjustly blamed for many of the pollution problems.

As far as water is concerned, the greatest polluters from agriculture are nutrients. The same nutrients that cause moss and algae to grow, also cause crops to grow, he said. "We need to know where the pollution is coming from before placing the blame.', he noted.

Smith showed a series of color slides, indicating that many of the nation's major sources of air and water pollution originate in urban areas. These include industrial waste, automobile exhaust fumes, salt on streets during cold weather and dumping of residue in lakes and rivers by large manufacturing companies.

He warned against lumping everything into "one basket," meaning that what will apply to the problems of the highly populated areas will not necessarily work in the less populated rural areas.

Southeast Missouri should not have to suffer for the problems caused by St. Louis, New York or Los Angleles, he said

What actually comes from natural compounds and what is synthetic? "I believe we are getting enough evidence to show that if technology is used as it should be, the farmer hasn't much to be concerned about," Smith said.

In reference to the amount of nitrate runoff collecting in water sources and consequently showing up in some of the food, Smith said that when a farmer goes beyond what the crop requires when using herbicides, insecticides or fertilizers, then he is vulnerable. That farmer may have to shoot for 95 per cent optimum yield instead of 100 per cent to stay on the safe side, Smith noted.

In answer to urban critics of the farmer and his use of artificial nutrients, Smith said the farmer actually improves his environment. Using a corn crop as an example, Smith said the crop produces much more oxygen than it uses and thus provides an ample oxyten supply for a number of persons that would not otherwise have been available.

Scott conservation needs inventoried

By DON BENEFIELD
Soil Conservation Officer

BENTON — Planning for the wise use of the land in Scott County requires good soil and water conservation measures. Soil and water conservation is protecting, using, maintaining and improving the land and water resources to best serve the people, both private and public, to provide food fiber, forest products, recreation and wildlife resources now and in the future.

There are 248,985 acres in Scott County. Of this total land area, 76 per cent is cropland, nine per cent is forest, four per cent pasture and 11 per cent is urban, water and highways. Of the 76 per cent in cropland, 54 per cent needs drainage and 28 per cent needs an annual cover. About 93 per cent of all the land in Scott County requires some type of conservation measure.

Pastures in the county need protection and improvement. Around 46 per cent of the pastures need a rotation system set up to protect them, with 22 per cent needing improvement by fertilization, reseeding or brush and weed control.

The production of our forest in the county is very low compared to what it could be if managed properly. Seventy per cent of all the forests need timber stand improvement by killing out undesirable and weed trees. Up to 25 per cent of the forests are not properly stocked and need reinforcement by replanting.

Only seven per cent of the land produces at full capacity without applying any conservation measures.

Bohnert leads Perry County dairymen again

PERRYVILLE — Sylvester Bohnert of Perryville again led the Perry County Dairy Herd Improvement Association for butterfat production, according to Arnold Schmidt, association fieldman. The Bohnert herd provided an aveage of 1.7 pounds of butterfat in 49 pounds of milk per cow per day.

Frank Sutterer, also of Perryville, ranked second for the month of October with 1.6 pounds of butterfatin 36.9 pounds of milk (figures are for all cows in the herd, including dry cows. In third place was Harvey Nischwitz of Gordonville, with production of 1.5 pounds of butterfat in 35.3 pounds of milk.

Chalmer Voelker herd of St. Mary's placed fourth, producing 1.5 pounds of butterfat in 32.3 pounds of milk, and Herb Kramer of Uniontown rated fifth with production of 1.4 pounds of butterfat in 45 pounds of milk per cow per day.

Carl Todt, Southeast Association fieldman, reports the top herd for October is Clem Schabbing of Cape Girardeau with butterfat of 1.5 pounds in 29.9 pounds of milk. Following Schabbing was Albert Gross of Gordonville with an average of 1.4 pounds of butterfat in 39.3 pounds of milk.

Third place went to Siemers Farms, Inc. of Gordonville for production of 1.3 pounds of butterfat in 33.2 pounds of milk, followed closely by Norman Brase of Gordonville with 1.3 pounds of butterfat in 32.2 pounds of milk. Harvey Brase ranked fifth with butterfat production of 1.2 pounds in 32.8 pounds of milk.

Trio ready for moon

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Today was final rehearsal for man's last planned visit to moon, a personal challenge for three Americans who have trained together nearly two years.

It was a familiar task for the men of Apollo 17, Eugene A. Cernan, Ronald E. Evans and Harrison H. Schmitt—donning space suits, activating switches and awakening the lunar lander named Challenger.

But this time there's a key difference. The moon, soaring in black space just ahead, is only one day away.

The men of Apollo 17 were rested, ready and on target for their lunar adventure. They perform the real thing Monday when Challenger sets down on the moon for an exploration science hopes will fill missing gaps about that world's evolution.

The astronauts are to move into lunar orbit on Sunday.

In the rehearsal Cernan and Schmitt, who are to be the 11th and 12th Americans to visit the moon, float through a tunnel connecting the command ship, America, with the smaller lunar module. Then they close the hatch connecting the two craft, sealing themselves from the command ship to test oxygen and other systems.

Evans remains aboard America, just as he will when his crewmates land on the moon.

Cernan, the 38-year-old commander of the final Apollo, and Schmitt, a Harvard-trained geologist and the first U.S. scientist in space, boarded Challenger for the first time Friday and found it in good shape.

"It looks clean," Schmitt told Mission Control during the two hour inspection. "Everything is fine looking. Looks like there's some life in the old bird."

The astronauts detected only one small problem—one of 12 latches sealing Challenger and America together failed to completely engage. Evans inspected the latch, but on orders from the ground, did not engage it. Mission Control said the failure causes no serious concern since only nine of the latches need to engage for a secure linkup.

During the inspection Friday, Cernan and Schmitt loaded Challenger with the film magazines, tools and other equipment they will need on the moon's surface. They also checked the moon lander's switches and instruments and told Mission Control all were operating properly.

While his crewmates worked in Challenger, Evans conducted an experiment in the behavior of fluids in weightlessness. He heated a container of liquid which takes on a color when hot. The changes in the liquid are photographed and scientists will later study the pictures to learn about heat convection in space.

"There are a lot of big bubbles boiling up," said Evans as he watched the liquid heat. "It's a pretty picture."

Scientists are interested in learning how heat and liquids behave in space for potential application in other space experiments or in manufacturing processes.

The astronauts awoke Friday well adjusted to the space environment. Ironically, only Cernan, a three-time space veteran, had any sort of complaint. Schmitt and Evans, both on their first space voyage, said they were comfortable.

Cernan's complaint was of digestive gas.

Schmitt expressed delight at rediscovering a food from his childhood.

"I have just eaten my first peanut butter sandwich," he said. "It was just as good as when I was growing up, which means it was great. I grew up on those things."

Cernan added, "I sure miss the mayonnaise and lettuce on mine though."

America and Challenger, hooked nose-to-nose since shortly after leaving earth orbit early Thursday, are precisely aimed for arrival in lunar orbit Sunday. The spacecraft will arc behind the moon and lose radio contact with earth at about 2:37 p.m. Sunday. Eleven minutes later, the astronauts will fire America's rocket engine to slow the fleeting spacecraft and settle it into moon orbit.

Apollo 17's lunar landing target is a crater-scarred box canyon among lunar mountains in the upper right quarter of the moon's disc as viewed from earth.

The site, called Taurus-Littrow, is guarded by high mountains on the north and south and by a 100-foot cliff on the west.

Cernan and Schmitt will fly into the landing site over another group of mountains and hills and touch down between craters large enough to swallow their moon lander.

The two men will spend 75 hours on the moon's surface in a search for information needed to complete the first and last chapter's of man's history book on lunar evolution. They will explore a landslide and a mountain foot seeking rocks dating back near the orgin of the moon 4.6 billion years ago. Riding an electric car, they also will scan the nearby plains for evidence of the last volcano some 100,000 million years ago.

Evans will operate an array of cameras and science instruments which will probe the moon from orbit.

Cernan and Schmitt will end the moon visit at 5:56 p.m. Thursday when they blast away from the surface aboard Challenger. They will rejoin Evans in the command ship for a final day in lunar orbit.

The lunar voyage will end on Tuesday, Dec. 19 with splashdown in the South Pacific.

Businessmen and employes should keep a watch on all customers.

Many enter a store with no intention of stealing, but will do so if employes ary not paying attention.

Detection devices, such as mirrors, television cameras and floorwalkers, are great deterrents to shoplifting, police say.

Police also urge that all offenders be prosecuted. Many of those caught by businessmen, are simply lectured and turned loose. Police say that contrary to what many businessmen believe, prosecuting shoplifters does not hurt business.
